Indigenous Peoples’ Rights in the Field
3rd Annual Course & Fieldtrip

August 5-11, 2013
Amubri, Talamanca, Costa Rica

Instructors: Professor Mihir Kanade
Ms. Adilia Caravaca
Professor Jacobo Schifter

Description: This course aims to undertake a study of indigenous peoples’ rights through the lived experience of an indigenous community close to the Caribbean coast of Costa Rica. The course combines theoretical and normative areas of indigenous peoples’ rights with field study, and includes the experience of being hosted for 5 days by a group of indigenous women from the community. The course is ideal for human rights advocates working with NGOs and civil society organizations, practitioners, academics, and students studying in areas of indigenous peoples’ rights, human rights, environment, gender and development.

Language: English

Costs: $1,650 USD (discounts for groups of two or more are available)

Registration is now open.
Only 15 seats are available. Apply Now!

For further information, please contact:
Web: www.hrc.upeace.org   E-mail: hrc@upeace.org   Human Rights Centre, University for Peace