PROPOSAL BY THE EXECUTIVE BOARD
FOR AN OVERALL STRATEGY FOR HUMAN RIGHTS EDUCATION

The General Conference,

1. Having examined document 30 C/13,

2. Endorses the Executive Board’s recommendations regarding the overall strategy for human rights education (156 EX/43) as follows:

UNESCO’s overall strategy for human rights education

(a) In order to formulate a future strategy for human rights education, an evaluation of UNESCO’s publications on human rights education and information during the present Medium-Term Strategy is necessary; this stocktaking activity is of utmost importance in the light of the new information and communication technologies available and of making optimal use of the already existing networks of Associated Schools, UNESCO Chairs and others. Increased use should be made of the Internet. UNESCO’s homepages should be improved by, e.g. extending links to the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights as well as to the National Commissions for UNESCO, IGOs, NGOs, academic and other institutions.

(b) The contacts and cooperation with the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights should take place on a large basis in the UNESCO Secretariat.

(c) UNESCO’s efforts as regards the collection and diffusion of material on human rights education should be continued and strengthened; those activities should be conducted in close collaboration with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights, UNICEF, UNDP, ILO and other interested United Nations institutions as well as with NGOs in the field of human rights. The main goal should be the highest possible degree of transparency on procedures against human rights violations taking into account the existing mechanisms on the observance of human rights both at the global and regional level, including the activities of the United Nations treaty bodies and the UNESCO and ILO procedures.

(d) Those information activities should be seen in close relationship with all human rights education which depends on further human rights research and results in action against human rights violations wherever they occur. Special emphasis should be laid on ethical commitments or people related to human rights education.

(e) The decisions taken by the Director-General between the first and the second meeting of the Temporary Working Group in order to improve the coordination of existing activities in the field of human rights education and information within the framework of the Transdisciplinary project “Towards a culture of peace” were appreciated as important steps; further conceptual work will be necessary in order to clarify the intrinsic value and strategic importance of human rights education.
within the project. The new coordination mechanism should be accompanied by a strengthened intellectual leadership. Coordination should take place at a sufficiently high level.

(f) The Temporary Working Group took note of the ongoing deliberations on the methods of work of the Committee on Conventions and Recommendations (CR) as well as on the future activities of the International Bureau of Education (IBE). The impact of these results should be taken into due account in a future strategy on human rights education.

(g) Regional conferences are important for the development of human rights education and for promoting links and contacts between specialists in this field. The preparation of such conferences should be based in both of the Secretariat sectors concerned. Comparative analyses should be made of the results of the conferences.

(h) In order to improve the substance and methods of human rights education in terms of identifying concrete examples and materials, UNESCO should become involved in:

- comparative textbook analyses on the content of human rights;
- the identification of best practices in human rights education;
- country review procedures on human rights education; and
- the development and use of simulation exercises as effective pedagogical tools, e.g. on the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights or on other United Nations treaty bodies.

The setting up of a monitoring and evaluation procedure in the field of human rights education will be necessary.

(i) Issues related to cultural diversity shall be considered in the discussions aiming at improving human rights education. UNESCO should further encourage and assist Member States to launch national plans and establish focal points for human rights education as laid down in the Plan of Action for the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education (1995-2004).

(j) Human rights education requires continued attention and should not be restricted to the celebration of specific days, years or decades.

(k) Concerning the mandate and working methods of the Advisory Committee on Education for Peace, Human Rights, Democracy, International Understanding and Tolerance, the Working Group stressed the importance of its contribution and its existence. It was suggested that:

- members of the Advisory Committee be specialists in the field of education as laid down in Article 50.2 of the Regulations for the general classification of the various categories of meetings convened by UNESCO, and in Article 3.1 of the Statutes of the Advisory Committee itself;
• the Advisory Committee meet at least once a year;
• a permanent feedback pattern be established to ensure regular interaction and communication between the Advisory Committee and the Secretariat;
• better use be made of the expertise of the members of the Advisory Committee, also during the intervals of its meetings;
• short, analytical notes be sent in due time to the members of the Committee to be dealt with at its meetings;
• an information network be established between the Secretariat and the members of the Committee as well as between them;
• a regular exchange of documentation be guaranteed between the Advisory Committee and other committees with mandates in related fields of activity;
• each committee be represented in meetings of other committees in order to guarantee concerted action and a better flow of information;
• the dates of the following meeting of the Advisory Committee be fixed during the meeting in session;
• the Advisory Committee’s minutes also be distributed to the Ministries of Education and the National Commissions for UNESCO in order to increase impact and transparency.

The Temporary Working Group further recommended that the mandate and working methods of the Advisory Committee be evaluated again after two Committee meetings.

   The General Conference,

   Bearing in mind the UNESCO Fifth International Conference on Adult Education held in Hamburg in 1997 which agreed a Declaration and Agenda for the future setting out aims, strategies and commitments for adult learning of participating governments, in particular [inter alia] through the development of an International Adult Learners’ Week,

   Further bearing in mind that the Hamburg Declaration called upon UNESCO as the United Nations lead agency in the field of education, to play the leading role in promoting adult education and to stimulate the support of all partners, particularly those with the United Nations, to give priority to implementing the Agenda for the Future,
Noting that effective lifelong learning can help address basic skills needs in literacy, widen participation and promote access to learning, reduce inequality, improve employability, contribute to community development and to social inclusion,

Convinced that the proposal of the International Adult Learners’ Week will enrich the International Literacy Day and will strengthen its links to the larger adult learning movement to which it contributes,

Further noting that at least 22 countries now run, or are planning to run, Adult Learners’ Weeks which provide an annual national focus on adult learning, to celebrate learners’ achievements, and to provide opportunities to promote lifelong learning by giving existing learners a role in mobilizing others and engaging the mass media in energizing people all over the world to learn,

Invites Member States to participate actively in lifelong learning in a way that meets their own particular needs;

Further invites Member States to give their support to an International Week of Adult Learning to be launched at Expo 2000 in Hanover on 8 September 2000, to coincide with the International Literacy Day;

Invites the Director-General to transmit this resolution to the United Nations Secretary-General with a request that he communicate it to the United Nations General Assembly with a view to the participation of all Member States of the United Nations in an International Adult Learners’ Week.

- 30 C/DR.86 (Republic of Korea, Malaysia), Asia-Pacific Centre of Education for International Understanding, as amended by the Director-General in paragraph 22 of 30 C/8 COM.II, on the understanding that the resolution has no financial implications.

The resolution reads as follows:

The General Conference,

Reaffirming the responsibility of UNESCO and its Member States to promote education for international understanding, justice, freedom, human rights and peace as urged notably in the 1974 Recommendation concerning Education for International Understanding, Cooperation and Peace and Education relating to Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms and also in the International Conference on Education’s (44th session, 1994) Declaration and Integrated Framework of Action on Education for Peace, Human Rights and Democracy, respectively endorsed and approved subsequently by the General Conference of UNESCO at its 28th session in 1995,

Recognizing the need for international and intercultural understanding, and for education for peace, democracy, human rights and sustainable development in the Asia-Pacific region where so much cultural diversity, urgent developmental needs and numerous possibilities for conflict exist,

Recognizing the urgent need for a more active mechanism of regional cooperation and collaboration in research and development, training and information and material development in order to provide technical assistance as regards education for international understanding to Member States of the region,
Recalling the proposal made by the Republic of Korea to the 29th session of the General Conference of UNESCO in 1997 to establish an Asia-Pacific Centre of Education for International Understanding in the Republic of Korea under the auspices of UNESCO, with a substantial amount of the financial requirements to be borne by the host country for the first five years,

Noting that the Republic of Korea has accumulated a great deal of experience, expertise, know-how and information in education for international understanding over the past several years, and that the Korean National Commission was designated in 1995 as the national centre of international understanding education to implement UNESCO’s programme objectives and guidelines for international understanding education,

Noting that the Republic of Korea has played the leading role in establishing and developing regional networks in the field of international understanding education, e.g. Asia-Pacific Network for International Education and Values Education (APNIEVE) and Asia-Pacific Philosophy Education Network for Democracy (APPEND),

Further noting the positive recommendation concerning the establishment of the Asia-Pacific Centre of Education for International Understanding contained in the feasibility study as carried out by a team of experts recommended by UNESCO in 1998, the positive recommendation of the Regional Consultation Meeting on the Proposal for a Regional Centre of Education for International Understanding held in Seoul on 29 April 1999 and the strong endorsement by APNIEVE,

Considering that the main function of the proposed centre is to carry out regional cooperative and collaborative work in the field of education for international understanding, inter alia, on research and development, training, teaching materials development, information dissemination, and international conferences and/or workshops, and further considering that the physical facilities and the necessary operational costs will be provided by the host country,

Invites the Director-General to support the establishment of this centre in the Republic of Korea and in so doing, include it within the main line of action for education for a culture of peace, keeping in mind its transdisciplinary character;

Further invites the Director-General to give necessary support for the establishment of the centre by providing technical and financial assistance for the initial establishment of the organization and the programme structure of the centre;

Invites the Member States to actively join the centre’s activities and to share their expertise and resources to support the centre by means of any contributions as appropriate.

30 C/DR.53 (Islamic Republic of Iran), Education and Sport for a Culture of Peace, as amended by the Director-General, paragraph 23 of document 30 C/8 COM.II. The resolution reads as follows:

The General Conference,

Mindful of the wish expressed in the United Nations Charter to “preserve future generations from the scourge of war”,
Recalling the International Charter of Physical Education and Sport adopted by the General Conference at its 19th session (1978),

Recalling 27 C/Resolution 5.16 which expresses the wish to infuse strong new life into UNESCO’s action in physical education and sport,

Endorses the Appeal launched at the closing session of the World Conference on Education and Sport for a Culture of Peace;

Recommends to the Third International Conference of Ministers and Senior Officials Responsible for Physical Education and Sport (Uruguay, Punta del Este) to be held from 30 November to 3 December 1999 to pay particular attention to this Appeal;

Calls upon Member States, UNESCO, CIO, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations and all those concerned, leaders, sports fans, and the media to act on this Appeal, to implement it and thus to contribute to the culture of peace movement throughout the world;

Invites the Director-General:

(i) to mobilize the Organization including its Field Offices, Institutes, National Commissions, Associated Schools and UNESCO Clubs to join hands with the sporting community in the promotion of a culture of peace;

(ii) to reinforce the relevant unit and strengthen education for a culture of peace action-oriented through physical education and sport within formal and informal education systems;

(iii) to establish, in coordination with the President of the IOC, a follow-up committee to ensure the identification and implementation of projects in the framework of the United Nations Decade for a Culture of Peace.

30 C/DR.95 (submitted by Guatemala, Panama, Democratic Republic of the Congo, San Marino, Rwanda, Equatorial Guinea, Haiti, Thailand, Dominican Republic, Kazakhstan, Benin, Lithuania, Cuba, Chile, Slovakia, Seychelles and Belize)

supported by Ecuador, Belgium, Peru, Viet Nam and Luxembourg, Implementation of a Language Policy for the World Based on Multilingualism, as amended during the debate by Canada, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Lao People’s Democratic Republic.

The General Conference,

Recognizing the need to improve understanding and communication among peoples,

Recognizing the great importance of safeguarding the linguistic and cultural heritage of humanity and extending the influence of each of the cultures and languages of which that heritage is composed,

Considering the current threat to linguistic diversity posed by the globalization of communication and the tendency to use a single language, at the risk of marginalizing the other major languages of the world, or even of causing the lesser-used languages, including regional languages, to disappear,
Considering that educating young people throughout the world involves sensitizing them to dialogue between cultures, which engenders tolerance and mutual respect,

Considering that substantial progress has been made in the last few decades by the language sciences, but that insufficient attention has been paid to the extraordinary ability of children to reproduce sounds at “key periods” of their development,

Noting that the ability of children to acquire phonetic and grammatical skills has been scientifically corroborated,

Considering that these skills enable young children to acquire competence at an early age in real communication, both passive and active, in at least two languages, whatever they may be,

Aware that democratic access to knowledge depends on a command of several languages and that provision of such access for all is a duty at a time when private language training, which is both expensive and elitist, is spreading in many countries,

Mindful of the resolutions adopted in support of bilingual education at the 18th and 19th sessions of the General Conference of UNESCO (1974 and 1976),

Taking into account the establishment by the Executive Board of UNESCO in October 1998 of an Advisory Committee for Linguistic Pluralism and Multilingual Education and the creation of the Languages Division by the Director-General in 1998,

Recommends that Member States:

1. Create the conditions for a social, intellectual, media and international environment conducive to linguistic pluralism;

2. Promote, through multilingual education, democratic access to knowledge for all citizens, whatever their mother tongue, and build linguistic pluralism. Strategies to achieve these goals could include:

   the early acquisition (in kindergartens, nursery schools) of a second language in addition to the mother tongue, offering alternatives;

   further education in this second language at primary-school level through an approach based on the medium of instruction, i.e. by using two languages for the acquisition of knowledge throughout the school course up to university level;

   intensive and transdisciplinary learning of at least a third modern language in secondary school, so that when pupils leave school they have a working knowledge of three languages - which should represent the normal range of practical linguistic skills in the twenty-first century;

   an assessment of secondary-school leaving certificates promoting a grasp of modern languages from the point of view of communication and understanding;

   international exchanges of primary- and secondary-school teachers, offering the latter a legal framework for teaching their subjects in schools in other countries, using their own languages and thus enabling their pupils to acquire both knowledge and linguistic skills;
due attention in education, vocational training and industry to the potential represented by minority languages, where they exist, and regional languages, migrants’ languages of origin);

availability to teachers and education authorities of a computerized network, including a database, to facilitate exchanges of information and experience;

establish a “national and/or regional committee to study and make proposals on linguistic pluralism” in order to initiate the necessary dialogue between the representatives of all professions and all disciplines so that they can identify the main lines of a language education system which is adapted to each country but which also facilitates international communication, while preserving the rich and inalienable linguistic and cultural heritage of humanity.

3. Encourage the study of the languages of the major ancient and modern civilizations, with a view to safeguarding and promoting a literary education;

The General Conference invites the Director-General to implement this resolution in consultation with the Advisory Committee for Linguistic Pluralism and Multilingual Education.

(ii) further consolidate the conceptual and normative foundations of the culture of peace, paying particular attention to mechanisms and arrangements for preventing violence and stemming conflicts at their source; to the relations between cultural pluralism, respect for human rights and democratic governance; and to the inclusion of a gender perspective in the study of factors that may encourage or impede the development of a culture of peace;

(b) to allocate for this purpose an amount of $1,850,000 for programme costs, $2,462,100 for staff costs and $150,000 for indirect programme costs (scenario A).

The General Conference

Authorizes the Director-General

(a) to implement the following plan of action on the basis of the recommendations of the Executive Board’s temporary working group on human rights education, in order to:

(i) contribute to the development of education policies which place the objective of education for a culture of peace at the very heart of the educational process, paying particular attention to implementation of the Plan of Action of the United Nations Decade for Human Rights Education and to the development of strategies and programmes which are geared to the needs of countries in pre- or post-conflict situations,

(ii) encourage the dissemination and adaptation of textbooks and teaching materials developed in earlier biennia and the development of training courses and modules for teachers and professionals with particular responsibility in this field; to mobilize the UNESCO Chairs network for this purpose by continuing to support its expansion and the strengthening of its internal cooperation mechanisms; and also to encourage educational innovation for more effective prevention of violence, in particular through sport, and for promoting gender equality;

(iii) extend and improve the Associated Schools Project network by fostering recognition of its pilot role in promoting educational innovation, by enhancing its impact on national systems, and by reinforcing communication and cooperation between its members;
(iv) promote linguistic diversity and multilingual education at all levels of education, in cooperation with networks such as LINGUAPAX and LINGUAUNI; to encourage the exercise of linguistic rights as an integral part of human rights; and to encourage the protection and development of the world’s linguistic heritage;

(b) to allocate for this purpose an amount of $4,200,000 for programme costs and $6,322,900 for staff costs (scenario A).

(ii) promote the practices of cultural pluralism and support its protagonists, paying particular attention to the innovative experiments under way at the local level, especially in urban contexts, with a view to strengthening social cohesion within multi-ethnic and multicultural societies; and to contribute to the implementation of the Programme of Activities of the International Decade of the World’s Indigenous People, by strengthening existing cooperation networks and mechanisms at the regional and interregional levels, particularly in Latin America;

PART III - UNESCO IN THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

At the end of the debate, the Commission examined draft resolution 30 C/COM.II-III-IV-V/DR.2 (submitted by Belgium, Luxembourg, Sweden, Portugal, Spain, France and Germany), and recommended that the General Conference decide to adopt the resolution. The resolution reads as follows:

The General Conference,

Recalling the unanimous adoption, at its 29th session, of resolution 53 on poverty alleviation, as a major contribution to the First United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006),

Welcoming the poverty alleviation concerns expressed in document 30 C/5, with special reference to paragraph 21 of the Director-General’s introduction, Programme I.1 of Major Programme I, Basic education for all, Subprogramme II.2.5 of Major Programme II, Social transformations and development (MOST Programme), main line of action 2, Poverty alleviation, and the Transdisciplinary project “Towards a culture of peace”,

Urges Member States to:

ensure that the United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty is a success and satisfies the aspirations of all those throughout the world who are victims of poverty and social exclusion;

ensure in particular that cultural development (culture, education and communication) is accorded a prominent position in the activities of the Decade;

ensure follow-up to 29 C/Resolution 53 and to study appropriate steps to be taken, under the Programme and Budget for 2000-2001, for acting upon the guidelines so affirmed;
implement the commitments entered into at recent international conferences organized by UNESCO, particularly the Intergovernmental Conference on Cultural Policies for Development (Stockholm);

Invites the Director-General to:

make poverty alleviation a long-term priority for the UNESCO of the twenty-first century in all its fields of competence;

increase in all UNESCO’s programmes recognition of and the acknowledgement of the cultural dimension of development as a necessary condition for reaching the families and population groups in situations of extreme poverty, in an effort to meet the goals of the Copenhagen World Summit for Social Development and of the United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty;

reiterate to the Secretary-General of the United Nations, in accordance with Point 8 of the Action Plan adopted by the Conference on Cultural Policies and Development (Stockholm, 1998), the request that one year of the Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006) be devoted to the links between culture, development and poverty alleviation;

mobilize all UNESCO units with a request to give high priority, in the implementation of the four Major Programmes, the transdisciplinary projects and the transverse activities, to the matter of extreme poverty, ensuring in particular that populations affected by acute poverty are indeed reached;

launch practical activities responding to these guidelines and to evaluate them regularly;

set up the external advisory group of the Intersectoral Committee on Development and Poverty Eradication provided for in the Director-General’s Note 98/21 of 15 May 1998, in order to gather fresh information on situations of acute poverty and thereby to guide policies more precisely;

report to the Executive Board at its 159th session on activities carried out in the spirit of 29 C/Resolution 53, and on activities contemplated in order to follow up document 30 C/5.

UNESCO in the twenty-first century

(...) The 7th and 8th meeting of the Commission, Friday afternoon, 12 November, and Saturday morning, 13 November, were devoted to debating item 4.1 “UNESCO in the twenty-first century”. Twenty-three Member States took part in the debate.

New challenges of the twenty-first century with major implications for UNESCO mentioned by the speakers, and upon which there appeared to be a general consensus, were the following:

- bringing about a culture of peace, security, democracy, and justice;
- tolerance, and respect for human rights (“living together in a multicultural world”, Delors report); and establishing “humane” societies devoted to promoting human welfare and well-being, and responding to the sociocultural needs and aspirations of their citizens;

- empowering individuals and societies to adapt to and seize the opportunities arising from rapidly changing realities, and particularly from the sociocultural demands and consequences of cultural, economic and financial globalization;

- overcoming social inequalities and discriminations which prevent access for all to education at all levels, and to new information, communication, and learning technologies.

It was strongly emphasized that it is the ethical mission of UNESCO to address these challenges, and that education and human resources development are an essential - even central - means for doing so and for promoting sustainable development. Poverty/hunger alleviation was noted to be a major cross-cutting objective of UNESCO’s response to the challenges. (However, some speakers noted a disparity between the scale of the challenges to be addressed and the resources available to the Organization.)

Speakers identified two major opportunities for strategic action:

1. UNESCO as “an organization for intellectual cooperation with an ethical vocation” (a forward-looking, knowledge-based organization), with the principal functions being:
   - to act as a global forum/laboratory for intercultural, trans/interdisciplinary ideas and strategic dialogue, and for innovative research to generate knowledge and learning;
   - to collect, analyse, exchange and disseminate pertinent, useful and inspirational data and information, experiences, and good/best practices as regards, in particular, the use of new technologies in education, and ensuring the quality of educational methodologies and materials and of national educational development projects and programmes. In this regard, speakers emphasized the pressing need to establish educational databases, with access points available everywhere and to all; and - based on the knowledge acquired - to stimulate or promote credible concrete initiatives, and mobilize support and resources, energies and talents, for their undertaking.

2. UNESCO as an intergovernmental organization which increasingly is called upon to stimulate the creation of global partnerships, alliances and networks for achieving global educational development objectives.

Speakers noted that the achievement of major global educational development objectives (Education for All, Jomtien; adult education, Hamburg; technical and vocational education, Seoul; higher education, Paris, etc.), as well as success in addressing challenges raised notably by the Delors and Pérez de Cuéllar reports, require joint and/or coordinated and complementary responses by the United Nations System; world and regional banks, including the IMF; regional intergovernmental organizations such as the OECD, Council of Europe, and OAS; National Commissions; NGOs; and -very notably - openings to civil society, the private sector, and the expertise of centres of excellence. The Education Sector Institutes could play a significant role in coordinating responses - and their quality - in their fields of specialization.
It was agreed also that normative and standard-setting should continue to be a major strategic endeavour of the Organization, but require the commitment of Member States to have successful outcomes; and the following cross-cutting issues and concerns were recommended by various speakers for infusion throughout UNESCO’s strategic programme: cultural diversity; decentralization; education throughout life; environment; health, including HIV/AIDS; human rights; “learning to live together”; peace; population; and sustainable development.

Speakers identified the following priority beneficiaries and fields of action for the future:

- Teachers (through interaction with society at large, enhance their status, knowledge, and civic and ethical leadership roles; set [voluntary] standards for their recruitment and professional development; develop teaching methodologies and resource materials; and, in a learning society, perhaps review traditional concepts of student/teacher relationships);

- Youth, with an emphasis on culture of peace education, and using and applying their capacities in addressing UNESCO’s challenges;

- The education of girls and women;

- The integration, through education of minority and indigenous populations;

- Girls, women, and marginalized populations, as a general rule.

Particular mention was made of the continued need for the Education Sector to provide general policy advice and technical assistance to Ministries of Education; and of the need for support to technical, vocational and scientific education, particularly in collaboration with the employment sector and labour market; and - to a lesser extent - to action in favour of capacity-building, rural education, lifelong learning (both for occupational and personal well-being), human rights, literacy, educational management, linguistics, and the development of global indicators for monitoring and comparing changes and progress in global endeavours.

Finally, a major concern of many speakers was that action be in conformity with the conclusions of major UNESCO and United Nations international conferences, thus working to ensure an efficient and effective follow-up and implementation of their education-based recommendations.

With regard to updating the operating methods and organizational structure of UNESCO, speakers made the following comments and suggestions:

UNESCO must do more for less, by focusing and concentrating its resources on priority fields of action (however, some speakers called for more resources - even an increased share of the overall UNESCO budget - to be devoted to Major Programme I, particularly for the purpose of reaching the unreached).

Comprehensive and transparent strategic planning and target-setting at all levels (establishing synergy between the organization as a whole, its sectors, field offices, and Institutes, and National Commissions and associated NGOs, both singly and together) should facilitate the tasks of identifying priorities (areas where UNESCO has a comparative advantage, can make visible, value-adding contributions), and of allocating resources cost-effectively and efficiently - particularly within the context of decentralization - perhaps bringing about a more favourable balance between direct and indirect programme costs, and the application of more competencies to the development of national and regional capacities. Programmes should be elaborated through in-depth dialogue with Member States, and equitably and objectively address the needs of all Member States and regions. Different planning documents (such as the C/4 and C/5) should have a common structure for purposes of comparison.

Many speakers emphasized the need to strengthen and expand programme auditing and evaluation mechanisms and exercises - and their follow-up - as a major tool for learning lessons (including those from failures) for improving the quality of UNESCO’s performance.

Finally, it was noted that further efforts had to be made to modernize and/or simplify UNESCO’s management and administration culture.
